

Have you seen this story recently?

It was down to a cat being treated inappropriately by a resident of Coventry which was publicised on the internet and lead to feelings of hatred and threats of revenge against the person responsible (Mary Bale) for what she did to the cat.

Somehow the problems I had a month ago being treated inappropriately by my family from Coventry which were publicised on the internet lead to feelings of hatred towards me after my quest for justice and revenge against my cousin for what he did to me.

There is so much in common with what happened weeks ago, so this looks like another perception of the future where I get treated badly or visit the area and many factors connected create national headlines. Have I jinxed Coventry now like what Bridgend got for all the suffering I went through? I wonder if like Bridgend became the suicide capital of the UK after years of psychological torture I experienced, will Coventry become the revenge or hate capital of the UK as these factors have made Coventry known for this. If it does I will be wondering what next.

Everywhere I have been and had a bad experience something similar crops up like these two. There are times where nothing bad happens but coincidentally something happens and gets into the news. So inappropriate treatment, resident of Coventry, exposure on the internet with feelings of hatred and threats of revenge are too many factors in common to let this rest being so close to what happened a few weeks ago.

<http://www.metro.co.uk/news/839065-mary-bale-quizzed-by-police-after-throwing-cat-in-wheelie-bin>

<http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2010/aug/25/mary-bale-lola-cat-wheelie-bin>

I am quite pleased in one sense – not by the cruelty to the cat but yet another unexplained phenomena which makes me feel like nature is on my side trying to tell me something. Something is looking after me to have made me survive what I have been through in life and seems to cast an act of revenge on the areas which treated me inappropriately. Is this an act of nature?

John

Purr-minator ... Mary's sick act of cruelty caught on camera

MOGGIE mauler Mary Bale yesterday admitted dumping a family's pet puss in a wheelie bin - but insisted: "I don't know what the fuss is about, it's just a cat."

The grey-haired spinster faces a possible RSPCA prosecution after shock CCTV footage showed her scooping up four-year-old tabby Lola "as a joke".

Millions were sickened by the video after it was posted on the internet and animal-lovers from as far away as AUSTRALIA have since levelled death threats online.

Concern grew as her details were posted online and a Facebook group demanded "Death to Mary Bale".

One post urged: "This woman should be murdered."

The Sun tracked down 45-year-old Bale to her scruffy terraced house in Coventry, less than half a mile from where she grabbed Lola.

But when questioned by our reporter, the defiant bank worker threw back her head and LAUGHED.

She said: "I really don't see what everyone is getting so excited about - it's just a cat. I was walking home from work and saw this cat wander out in front of me.

"I was playing with it, stroking it and listening to it purr as it stood on a garden wall. It was very friendly.

"I don't know what came over me, but I suddenly thought it would be funny to put it in the wheelie bin, which was right beside me.

Confession ... Bale explains cat episode at her Coventry home

"I did it as a joke because I thought it would be funny. I never thought it would be trapped. I expected it to wriggle out of the bin."

Bale was seen on the footage peering furtively from side to side before picking up the luckless puss.

But she said: "People are reading too much into things. I've no feelings about cats one way or the other. I don't keep pets myself - but I have no problem with people who do.

"To think this video is being seen around the world is unbelievable. I'm a very private person and don't want to upset any members of my family. I don't know what my relatives will think, but to be honest I think everyone's overreacting a bit.

"OK, I shouldn't have done it - but it's just a cat at the end of the day. I don't think I deserve to be hated by people all over the world, it was just a split second of madness.

"Cats are good climbers and I assumed it would just scramble out through the lid and go on its way."

In fact, terrified Lola was trapped in the bin for 15 HOURS before her worried owners found her and freed her unhurt.

Bale now faces losing her job as a customer services assistant at Royal Bank of Scotland.

She said: "I've had my boss ringing to ask me what's going on, and I've had to talk to the bank's security people about what to do if people who think I hurt the cat try to find me.

"Everything has gone crazy because of a stupid spur-of-the- moment thing I did - but I know I only have myself to blame.

"I wish I'd never set eyes on the cat. But what I'm really worried about at the moment is my father who is not very well in hospital."

Bale's shocked mum Celia yesterday claimed her daughter "loves cats".

She said: "She absolutely adores animals - this doesn't make sense.

"Her father Maurice is in hospital very ill and I think she was just in a world of her own."

Bale was caught on CCTV cameras rigged up by Lola's owners Stephanie and Darryl Andrews-Mann.

The pair realised their pet was missing late on Saturday, but were unaware that Bale had deposited her inside the plastic bin at about 8pm.

Only when they viewed the bizarre video footage did they realise where she had gone and rush to free her.

Happy ... Lola with Sun treats yesterday

The film showed Bale stroking the cat as it walked along a wall and affectionately rubbed against her.

Bale was seen glancing around before lifting Lola by the nape of her neck, raising the bin's lid and dumping the helpless moggie inside before strolling off down the street.

In a bid to trace the culprit, Stephanie, 24, put the video on YouTube, where it had last night been viewed by more than 100,000 people in the UK alone.

Stephanie urged West Midlands cops to take Bale to court for animal cruelty, saying: "To think someone near us could do this sends chills down my spine. For her to say it was a joke is disgusting."

Outrage ... CCTV pictures show Bale throw cat in bin and walk off

But last night Stephanie, who shares her home with Darryl, 26, and eight-year-old daughter Chloe, insisted appalled animal-lovers should NOT seek revenge.

She said: "Now the police know who she is, I think people should leave it to them and the RSPCA to deal with it. I don't like her, but I don't want her to get hurt." Police yesterday informally offered Bale protection in light of the threats, which saw her call cops herself.

A West Midlands Police spokesman said: "The RSPCA is leading an investigation and will interview the woman shortly.

"Coventry Police are supporting this investigation and urge the public to leave the matter to be dealt with correctly by the authorities. The woman has not been arrested because she has not committed a criminal offence."